Her clients operate in high tech, cleantech, life sciences, AI, SAAS, blockchain, and more, and range from large, high-growth companies to small, local businesses and nonprofits. She also works with venture capital investment firms, large private companies, and public companies.

Dani's practice covers a broad range of general corporate and transactional matters, including formation and financing of start-ups, mergers and acquisitions, corporate governance, securities laws, and other areas of corporate law. She also brings in knowledge from her experience as in-house counsel at Emerson Collective, where she drafted and negotiated various contracts, implemented and improved legal tech, and strategically advised a wide variety of teams.

Dani has particular expertise in advising mission-driven companies and applying private business solutions to community economic development problems. She has advised clients regarding becoming Public Benefit Corporations or obtaining "B Corp" certification; applying for 501(c)(3) tax exemption and/or pursuing fiscal sponsorship; transitioning to employee ownership, which establishes democratic leadership and profit sharing among participating employees; and other creative strategies for companies operating with a triple bottom line—fiscal, social, and environmental.
