EXPERIENCE

Bryce McKay is a technology transactions associate in the Seattle office of Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati.

During law school, Bryce provided research assistance for leading scholars in election law, administrative law, and environmental law fields.

Bryce brings a diverse array of legal interests to his practice. Prior to law school, Bryce co-founded a small agricultural research and development company. In that role, he led business terms negotiations on collaborative research agreements, material transfer agreements, non-disclosure agreements, and other partnership-critical documents. He also assisted in commercializing patented technology, calling upon clients in the western United States, Europe, and Asia.
