EXPERIENCE

Jocelyn Chow is a regulatory and compliance partner in the Hong Kong office of Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati. With a focus on antitrust, national security, and international trade matters, Jocelyn advises multinational corporations on all aspects of antitrust law, global economic and trade sanctions, export controls, import controls, rules of origin, and foreign investment controls. She works with companies operating across numerous industrial sectors, including defense, bioscience, advanced engineering and technology, aviation, telecommunications and broadcasting, and financial services.

With over a decade of experience representing regulators and commercial clients in contentious and non-contentious matters, Jocelyn integrates deep knowledge of competition law and trade regulation with a thorough understanding of regulatory frameworks and court procedures. She counsels clients on compliance, self-assessments, merger and foreign investment controls, and distribution and other commercial contracts, in addition to representing clients in regulated transactions, market studies, public consultations, high-stakes internal and government-initiated investigations, enforcement actions, and judicial reviews.

Prior to joining the firm, Jocelyn was a partner in the Hong Kong office of Eversheds Sutherland, where she led the Asia competition, trade, and foreign investment practice.

Jocelyn is fluent in English, Cantonese, and Mandarin, making her one of the few trilingual competition and trade practitioners in the Greater China region.
