NEW YORK, NY—August 4, 2026—Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati, the premier provider of legal services to technology, life sciences, and growth enterprises worldwide, today announced that Victor Nuñez has been appointed chief financial officer (CFO). Based in New York, Nuñez brings more than two decades of financial and operational experience at global law firms. He joins Wilson Sonsini as the firm continues to invest in the people, processes, and capabilities that support its long-term success and the needs of its clients.

Nuñez joins Wilson Sonsini following the recent appointment of chief operating officer (COO) Kate Stonestreet, under whose leadership he will oversee the firm's global finance function, including financial planning, accounting, treasury, and related operations.

"Like our clients, Wilson Sonsini is constantly evolving and embracing new ways to leverage data, technology, and talent to advance our goals," said Caz Hashemi, chief executive officer. "Victor has a proven ability to connect financial strategy with business priorities, helping organizations navigate change, make informed decisions, and position themselves for the future. We are thrilled to welcome him to Wilson Sonsini and look forward to the perspective and contributions he will bring to the firm."

Nuñez most recently served as global COO at Cooley LLP, where he led the firm's worldwide business operations. Previously, Nuñez served as global COO at Fried, Frank, Harris, Shriver & Jacobson LLP and as global CFO at Norton Rose Fulbright. Earlier in his legal industry career, he spent more than 15 years at White & Case, where he held a variety of finance and management roles before becoming COO for the Americas. He began his career in finance and strategy roles at American Express.

"A strong financial function is a cornerstone of a well-run organization, providing the structure, accountability, and discipline needed to manage the business effectively and efficiently," said Megan Baier, chief executive officer. "Victor understands the unique demands of leading finance at a firm of our scale and complexity and brings the experience and judgment to enhance our financial operations while ensuring our teams have the resources they need to deliver exceptional service to our clients."

“I’ve known Victor for many years, and what has always distinguished him is the trust and confidence he inspires in those around him,” said Stonestreet, chief operating officer of Wilson Sonsini. “He is a thoughtful, collaborative leader who brings people together, builds high-performing teams, and consistently demonstrates integrity, purpose, and a long-term perspective. I’m delighted to have the opportunity to work alongside him and know he will be a tremendous asset to our leadership team and the firm."

Nuñez holds an M.I.A. from Columbia University's School of International and Public Affairs and a B.A. from Wesleyan University. He also completed the Stanford Executive Program at Stanford Graduate School of Business.

“I have long admired Wilson Sonsini for its entrepreneurial spirit, its close connection to innovation, and the extraordinary companies and founders it has advised and served over the decades,” said Nuñez. “The firm has built something truly special by staying ahead of change while remaining deeply committed to its clients and people. I am excited to join the team and help carry that momentum forward.”
