EXPERIENCE

Larissa Morgan is an associate in the Seattle office of Wilson Sonsini Goodrich & Rosati, where she is a member of the firm's digital health industry group and healthcare practice. With a goal of simplifying the complex and layered world of health care regulation, Larissa counsels providers, payers, digital health companies, technology companies, and strategic investors on state and federal regulatory compliance matters, such as fraud and abuse laws, digital health, privacy, Medicare and Medicaid reimbursement, fee-splitting laws, corporate practice of medicine, and licensing standards. Larissa leverages her breadth of regulatory experience, along with her background in bioethics and health policy, to provide practical, comprehensive advice to her clients at every stage of their business, particularly in areas of emerging health innovation.

Larissa frequently serves as regulatory counsel on transactions and government investigations. She has assisted clients on complex, strategic transactions, joint ventures, and mergers and acquisitions, developing a regulatory plan and strategy, identifying and mitigating regulatory risks, ensuring compliance with state and federal requirements, and assessing the regulatory implications on a deal's life cycle. Larissa also supports clients undergoing government investigations and administrative proceedings for suspected non-compliance with state and federal health care laws, serving as a strategist between her clients and the government and helping her clients navigate intricate regulations.

Larissa was previously an associate in the health care group of Faegre Drinker in Philadelphia. During her time at Faegre, Larissa was also an adjunct professor at the University of Pennsylvania Carey Law School, where she co-instructed a regulatory law and policy seminar. Prior to attending law school, Larissa was a health insurance navigator at a public health organization in Philadelphia, where she specialized in health enrollment policy and services related to Medicaid and health insurance marketplace products.

Larissa is an avid writer and speaker on health care regulatory matters, and her work has previously been cited by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.
